Professor Bache's l.cciure.

We take pleasure in presenting to our readers an matters, no excuse is needed, since there is no subject which does or should at present possess a higher interest for the people of Wilmington, and no higher authority could be obtained than that of the de inguished head of the U. S. Coast Survey.

rof. Bache commenced his lecture by a general description of the coast of North Carolina, and of the several inlets lying under the protection of its Capes, and the shoals projecting from them, and alluded briefly to their changes. The Cape Fear inlet, though protected by the Cape, and by extensive able interest. shoals, (the Frying Pan shoals,) had, in consequence of the opening of New Inlet, shouled from before the beginning of the present century, and at such a rate, that now there was two and a half feet less water on the Main Bar at high water, than there had been in 1797 at low water; now there was 2d of May next. twelve feet only at high water, where there had formerly been fourteen and a half at low. The Cape Fear entrance was in a condition of rapid deterioration, and hence the importance, and, indeed, the urgent necessity of immediate action, to endeavor to arrest the evil. Natural causes were at work which must be counteracted, or the inlet would become too shoal to meet the demands of commerce.

The importance of this inlet, in a national or general point of view, was explained, as a harbor of refuge, and as a harbor head waters of the Cape Fear. To accommodate the larger coasting trade, a depth of fifteen to eighteen feet on the Bar

To Wilmington this outlet for its commerce is of vital importance. Close this outlet, and of what avail will be the large expenditure, amounting to millions, on rail roads to bring the produce of twenty-eight counties of this State and of several in South Carolina to the wharves of Wilmington. Of what avail to open the Coal Mines if the products cannot Fayetteville, vice John McRae resigned. be sent to market? Limit the exit to New Inlet alone, and the capacity for commercial increase will soon be reached .-The coastwise trade of Wilmington, now estimated at four millions of dollars, and the foreign exports of half a million, must inevitably dwindle away. Of twenty-eight vessels at the wharves when the commission on the improvement of the entrance, met in Wilmington in December last, four were on board the Steamer Fulton, for Mobile, barques, and fourteen brigs. With a decrease of the depth of water, these will be replaced by schooners, and the larger ble to compete with coasting vessels of greater draughts and therefore transporting with greater economy the commerce of Wilmington must undoubtedly retrograde. A large portion of the State is interested as well as Wilmington in arresting such a calamitous state of things.

Prof. Bache next described by reference to maps, prepared by the Coast Survey, the present condition of the Main channel, the rip or Western channel, and the New Inlet. In 1851 the depth on the Main Bar was 8 feet, on the bulk head of the Western channel 7 feet, and at New Inlet Bar 8 feet. Between 1851 and 1852 the Main Bar has shoaled nearly nine inches. Reference was made in complimentary terms to the labors of Lieut. Maffitt, and of Mr. Bolles, and Mr. Gregorie in making these surveys. Cape Fear entrance was shown from Mosely's Map of 1733, passing directly out to sea, through an opening of less than three quarters of a mile wide, the course of the river direct and not winding as now, the depth on the Main Bar 19 feet at high water. Where New Inlet now is, there was then a sand beach nearly a mile in width By reference to Joshua Potts' Map of 1797, (for which Prof. Bache acknowledged his indebtedness to R. W. Brown, Esq. the pioneer in the Cape Fear improvement,) a motion of the Man bar towards the land was shown, the New Inlet was opened but the passages between the two islands north of Smith's Island did not exist, and the inlet was comparatively sheal, if, as is most probable, the sounding on Potts' Map refer in all cases to high water. A table was shown containing a summary of the observed depths on the Main channel, the Western channel, and the New Inlet Bars, from which the deductions were drawn. 1st. That the observations were exact enough to show that the combined depths had always been from twenty to twenty-four feet, and, of course, the water which escaped through New Inlet was lost to the Main Bar. 2d. That the depths on the Western Bar had always been variable. Incidentally the differences were explained between this channel and Moffett's channel, in Charleston, which a commission had proposed to open by dredging the bulk head at its inner entrance. The question of the action of the jetty on the depth of the Western channel was also discussed, and a diagram, showing the shore line of Oak Island, by accurate survey, before the Fort lattys was commenced, was referred to as proving that the pre- that she put in at some intermediate point. sent shore line was several hundred feet inside of that of 1820 The effect of permitting the washing away of Oak Island was shown to be the inevitable destruction of the Western first dug over. channel. The jettys altered the position but not the depth of the channel, and, until one was constructed of sufficient length to reach the middle ground, such must continue to be the case. 3d The depth on the Main Bar has steadily dee cased, though at an irregular rate, since the opening of the managed to escape The commission on the Cape Fear improvement have end avored to ascertain the date of the opening of that I let, and have fixed it at about 1780. On this fine sand is thrown and moved to and fro by the waves, forcing the Bar inwards in North Easterly gales, and diminishing the depth on it-carrying it outward by Southwardly winds and increasing the depth.

Department for executing the work. The principles laid down by the Commission were to attempt no work which, if it should fail, would injure the navigation, but, on the contrary, only such as would do some good, separately and collectively, even if they did not produce the whole effect desired. To attempt by gradual steps the restoration of the shore line as it was previous to 1780, as nearly as possible, expecting to obtain again the twenty feet at high water, or nearly that depth, then existing upon the Main Bar. The details of the works should be left to the observation and experience of the local Engineers, who should not be changed during their progress.

Your efforts to enlighten us at a distance as "the sayings and doings" at the metropolis merit our thanks, and entitle you to some reciprocal favor. I must say that the course of the present administration, from the inaugural down to the last advices, commands the respect of its friends, while it silences the opposition. Its course upon appointments, while it may seem tardy to the restive portion of our Gas -One windy day last week, we took a walk own friends, is taken in caution and wisdom. The patronage of the government is always a de'icate and responsible duty to discharge. Our whig friends, as a matter of course, expect to go out, and that some democrat, who has devoted his time and talent, But they wish to go out decently, and, like Cæsar, if they fall, to fall with dignity. That is all they expect. A duty not pleasant may be performed so graciously that it will lose its offensiveness, while a favor may be granted so churlishly that the donor will be despised. But in the appointments thus far, equals, if they do not surpass, the fictitious horrors Gen. Pierce has struck the popular vein; and if the election could come on this spring our State would prove it by 10.000 majority for him. In his free and unsought appointment of Hon. James C. Dobbin. he selected the favorite son of our State. Mr. Dobbin was looked upon by all parties as the successor of Governor Reid, and as the most available as well as the most suitable man. That he had the heart of that even when "England was merry England," the democratic party was proved by the enduring constancy with which, through a long struggle of weeks and months in the last session, under the most the United States Senate, and never left him only at his earnest entreaties. And when they did leave him, no election was effected. We are not surprised to learn that his quiet, winning manners, his generous temperament, his pure intent, and firm purposes of right, are fixing for him in the national avor the same high stand he holds here at home .-He deserves it: he will attain it. To some it may than necessary-a trait of character which General Lee denounced to Gen. Washington "as rascally strike every thinking and feeling individual in that virtue" But a greater than any Lec has said that I, wisdom, dwell with prudence." He deserves the eulogium extorted by his opponent, in Macbeth:

-" Besides this, Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meekly, Hath been so clear in his great office, that his virtues Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against The deep damnation of his taking off."

But the day of retribution was at hand, and he has been restored. "May he live many years, and his shadow never be less." To us in North Carolina he is well known; but to those abroad it may be proper to say that he has been repeatedly elected to such a pass that a poor man's wife only claims enator from his dis rict, and is now the senator elect from the law of England that measure of protection in the present legislature *

Another appointment I have seen is the Hon. Green W. Caldwell as superintendent of the mint at Charlotte. John Bull, however—shall we say it—begins to think it high time to follow our advice. The London Morning Chronicle of March 12th has a leading article, commencing as follows: "The bill for the protection of women and children, introduced by Mr. Fitzroy on Thursday night, is conceived in the right spirit. It will go far to redeem what is, we fear, a national disgrace -Whether we are in any degree indebted for it to the somewhat vivacious and personal reply which the Women of America," sent to a recent address from their British sisters, it is superfluous to inquire .-Anyhow, the stern realities of our Police Courts of Mrs. Beecher Stowe. It is high time that we begin to look at home. Wheth r the crimes of tramp ling upon a wife, beating her with a poker, kicking and lacera ing her person, are peculiar to England or to our own times, we know not. It is always difficult to register the origin or progress of crime-all we can do is to detect and suppress it. We suspect there was always a good deal of coarse brutality a bout the boasted British character; and savage domestic tyranny, at least in the lower ranks of society, is, we fear, no new phenomenon in our annals .-Still it can hardly be doubted that cruel on rages upon women, chiefly perpetrated by their husbands and paramours, are largely increasing."

This, we think, is sufficient to show that the milk and water sentimentality of Stafford House is held at a cheap rate by sensible people in England, and that the ridiculous aspect of pseudo-philanthropy, which melts into tears over a romance, while i shuts its eyes and hardens its heart to the misery that lies weltering at its own doors, is beginning to country. Some of the "stern realities" above referred to are recapitulated in the course of what follows in the Chronicle. They form a catalogue of horrid brutalities too painful to quote. We will give a few of the London editor's comments:
